

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY as a mere catalogue or list of publications must appear to the uninitiated simply chaos, conveying apparently but little or no information. Besides, then, the general index at the end, which brings together all subjects and place-names, the short analysis by way of introduction—very short for so long a text—by noting the chief men and chief events, will serve as a further guide and help a little more to open up the general contents. It is thus hoped that this work may not be treated as a mere collection of books to be glanced at without understanding, but rather that it may serve as a means towards tracing the life, and the thoughts, and the various aspirations of our not unworthy antecessors. Treated in this way it will be a surprise to many—probably to very many—to find how closely the literature of a county will reflect the history of the country.

The plan adopted is that now generally used, known as the alphabetical.

1. A book is placed under the author's name. Sometimes this is not on the title page but signed to the preface, or in case of pamphlets at the end. Sometimes too by pseudonym and sometimes by only initials.

2. If quite anonymous and the title refers to a personal name or a place name such names are used.

3. In the absence of either of the above then the first noun in the title is taken.

As one volume relates entirely to Bath, many things under these rules, would have come in that volume under that place-name—Bath. To avoid such a long list, which must have been subdivided—the sub-divisions have been placed under their respective headings, such as Hospitals—Mineral Waters—Pump Room—Churches—Societies—Schools. Possibly in other cases the rules have not been for some reason exactly kept, the index should therefore always be closely consulted. Cross references have been avoided, these being left for the index.

When the place of imprint is not given,—London must be understood. This plan prevents a constant repetition and brings out more clearly one object,—the work of the local or provincial press.

Whilst a few small things seen have been omitted as unworthy, others which would seem to have been published have not been met with, perhaps they disappeared and have left no mark behind.

That the production of these volumes has been a labour of love without hope of reward, rather with a certainty the other way, cannot be urged as an excuse for any shortcomings. That such a work cannot be perfect or absolutely without omissions must be clear to all.

It is hoped, however, that after being so long desired, it may fairly fill a place in our local literature and be some advance towards a clear and distinct knowledge of our county history.

Further continuation should be done by co-operation and through the Archæological Society, and soon probably through the County Council.

INTRODUCTION.

SOMERSET may claim, against all other counties, first place typographically, with a work by Douglas, a monk of Glastonbury, printed by Caxton in 1480; and next by the Joseph of Armathy of Wynkyn de Worde in 1502.

Then theology and credulity and stories of monsters, as everywhere, make up the earliest reading until the beginning of the eventful 17th century.

Sermons, from the obvious professional necessity of harping ever on a well-worn never-advancing theme, may appear at first thought to many as not worthy of especial record.

Examined, however, collectively, as occasional local or political issues, when not printed as religious tracts or for profit, they will be found to be of some historical, sometimes of biographical, value, and good for fairly showing the current thought of their time.

In this category, Somerset may claim a sermon which produced results but little expected at its delivery. In 1608, at the consecration of James Montague (q.v.) as bishop of Bath and Wells, the preacher ventured boldly to defend the office and function of bishops, and claimed further for them a divine right or origin.

So novel a doctrine caused a great commotion. The sermon was translated and answered abroad, and often answered and refuted at home. The claim, with the implied right divine of a King, was especially imbued into the mind of the young prince, who as Charles I, pressed the regal notion to its utmost in politics on his own behalf; and forced the episcopal one in the church, through his protégé, Archbishop Laud. Both were unacceptable and against the spirit and determination of the country.

Laud was bishop of Bath and Wells in 1628, and curiously in that year William Prynne, destined to become his determined opponent, issued one work which Laud was able to use against him in his cruel persecution. A list of Prynne's works is given for the first time. Brought thus together, the turn of the national or general thought can be fairly seen. Prynne had indeed the pen of a ready writer—portentous—marvellous. A hater of "jesuits and romish vermin," he wrote, he tells us, entirely for the public good, and for all he wrote he never received or asked a penny. In opposition to the Court, and zealous against Laud, he suffered heavily, so helping to fan the smouldering fire of indignation which presently burst out, with the result known to us as the Civil War.

THE CIVIL WAR.

WITH Prynne must now be associated John Pym, 'King Pym' as he was called, the acknowledged leader in the Parliament, and a great power in the land. Others—theologians—who may be noted at this time are Richard Bernard, W. Sclater, Sam Crooke, and Humphry Sydenham.

With the beginning of the war came an increased issue of pamphlets. The "crouding in of many little pamphlets into the presse hath for many weeks detained this book," apologised one publisher. When in favour of the powers, such things were sold in the streets by women, "trotting mercuries," hawkers, and criers of "new, new, new and true news." If in opposition, they had to be dispersed surreptitiously or scattered about, generally in the night.

Of the news tracts, some specially issued, recorded any one important event as it occurred; others published on fixed days dealt with general events collected from correspondents in various parts, these were called weekly grubs, or three-penny grubs, a kennel of eager hounds. The following—although imperfect—list of the latter, with their days of publication, may perhaps be of interest:—

Monday	...	...	Mercurius Britannicus.
Tuesday	...	...	Weekly Intelligencer.
"	...	...	London Post.
"	...	...	Parliament Post.
Wednesday	...	...	Fast day. No issue.
Thursday	...	...	Parliament Scout.
"	...	...	Mercurius Civicus.
"	...	...	An exact Journal.
Friday	...	...	The Scottish Dove.
"	...	...	Perfect Diurnal.
Saturday	...	...	Weekly Account.
"	...	...	True Informer.
"	...	...	Mercurius Veridicus.

There were also:—

Perfect Occurrences.
 Perfect Passages.
 Exchange Intelligencer.

From time to time there was a second issue in one day, with additional matter, but the number and date were retained.

A little later in date there were also two comic issues :—

Mercurius Fumigosus.
Mercurius Jocosus.

The royalists had but one,

Mercurius Aulicus,
printed at Oxford.

A poem of 1646, entitled, Mercurius Britannicus, his welcome to hell, says—

To thee what was th' Oxonian Aulicus,
Or grand Mercurius Gallo-Belgicus,
Moderate Intelligence, or Civicus,
Perfect Diurnall, or Hibernicus,
Kingdome's Intelligence, or Rusticus,
Weekly Account, Scotch Dove, or Cœlicus,
Perfect Occurrences, or Aquaticus,
The London Post, or sweet Candidus.
Amongst all these (deare son Britannicus)
Th' hast shew'd thyselfe the best Mercurius.

These very interesting and very valuable pamphlets are arranged chronologically (see Civil War) that they may tell their own tale. It will be noticed that with the first attack on the bishops, William Pierce, of Bath and Wells, received his share of attention, and the angry feelings continuing, the first effect of the war was the disappearance of episcopacy, the abolition of the church, and the substitution of the Presbyterian system and the Directory.

THE EARLY LOCAL PRESS.

THESE Civil War tracts have a further interest, as through them begins the local or provincial press.

In March, 1642, the King left London and on the 18th arrived at York. There was a press at York, as a favoured city, but Robert Barker, the King's own printer, sent down a travelling press from London for the King's special use, which was at once set up in a house close by the King's lodgings. Barker's press in London still continued; so that some of the King's issues of this time are printed at York, some in London.

The first York thing which can be mentioned is,—His Majesties declaration to both houses of Parliament, &c., in answer to that presented to him at Newmarket, the ninth of March, 1641. Yorke printed by Robert Barker, &c., 1642.

There was a previous impression of this—London printed by Robert Barker, &c., dated 1641, showing the work as done before the 25th March, just as the York date, 1642, of the reprint shows that it was done there after the 25th March, but whether late in March or early in April cannot be fixed.

The next thing is,—The humble petition of the gentry, &c., of the county of York, presented to his Majestie the 5th April, 1642. With his Majesties answer, 7th April. York printed by Robert Barker, &c., 1642. This marks the press fairly at work.

About the 16th August, the King left York for Nottingham, intending a stay there. From Nottingham, on the 25th August, was sent a message to both Houses of Parliament, but, although the press was close by at York, this bears the impress—London, printed by Robert Barker, etc., 1642. Again, only four days later, another issue entitled:—His Majesties instructions to Commissioners of Array, etc., from our Court at Nottingham, 29th August, 1642, bears the imprint—York, printed by Robert Barker, etc. This must be the last thing printed by Barker at York, as on 1st September orders were given to move the press to Nottingham. Possibly this was done, but it was never set up; no work was printed there. Circumstances did not encourage a stay at Nottingham, so on the 19th Sept., the royal force marched away.

After being at many places, on the 3rd October the King was at Shrewsbury. Here was issued a proclamation:—From our Court at Shrewsbury the fourth of October. London, printed by Robert Barker, etc. So that the press did not accompany or follow the march from Nottingham. Under date 18th Oct., 1642, a pamphlet entitled:—The true copy of a letter, etc.; with divers remarkable passages from Shrewsbury,—contains a letter from Shrewsbury from Basill Waring, who "being an officer of the mayor of Shrewsbury was mightily employed about the King's business." Waring writes at the end of his letter,—The presse for printing is come to this towne and this day they are setting of it up in some vacant roomes in my house.

But before the press could be got to work, the Court had to leave. On the 19th, the day after the date of Waring's letter, the King marched away, leaving a few trained bands to guard the town. During the stay at Shrewsbury, a petition had been received from the city of London. This, with the King's answer, must have been handed to the printer on his arrival, and was at once printed as:—

The humble petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the citie of London to his Majestie. With his Majesties gracious answer thereunto.

Shrewsbury, printed by Robert Barker, printer to the king's most excellent majestie, etc. 1642.

This would be the first thing and the only thing printed at this time at Shrewsbury. The idea of moving the press must now have been abandoned and it consequently lay here dormant. By good fortune this is made clear, as in 1643, when Lord Capell was about Shrewsbury with a royalist force, he then again used this press. On 3rd April, 1643, he issued a proclamation—a single sheet—which was—

Imprinted at Shrewsbury by Robert Barker, printer to the king's most excellent majestie, etc. 1643.

Lastly, "Special Passages," 2nd July, 1643, notices the conveyance of paper to Shrewsbury for the printing press there.

Bristol, which had been held for the Parliament through 1642, surrendered to the king's forces about 26th July, 1643. On the 1st August his majesty began a march from Oxford to Bristol, intending to make a stay there to gather ships and mariners. Circumstances prevented this plan being carried out. But the intended move caused the press to be taken from Shrewsbury to Bristol. The correspondent of the True Informer, No. 10, for the week 18th to 25th November, 1643, writing from Bristol, says:—"There is a printing presse lately brought thither from Shrewsbury which doth as much disadvantage the Parliament cause as any army of Cavaliers by publishing invective discourses and scandalous reports against the Parliament to seduce the country people into the hands of papists." The chief corrector of this press was one Christopher Jenks, once in popish orders, but "as they say" turned protestant. This patronage, as in other cases, was put down to royal bias. Although Bristol bibliography is in no way intended here, nor indeed a complete list of Bristol Civil War tracts, yet a notice or inclusion of many of the latter was necessary on account of the overlap in the narrative; and further, a notice of the early press in connection with these issues, coming so near the county and so near the present purpose, could not be omitted.

The first thing issued in Bristol was entitled:—

Disloyalty of language questioned and censured, or, a sermon preached against the licentious loosenesse of seditious tongues.

By Rich. Towgood, B.D., one of his majesties chaplains, and vicar of Saint Nicholas church in Bristoll, Jan. 17, 1642.

With a brief corollarie now added, questioning and censuring rebellious actions.

Bristoll, printed for Rich. Harsell, and are to be sold by him in Bristoll, 1643.

The title says it was preached 17th Jany., 1642, and this date is again repeated on page 1, the beginning of the sermon. A marginal note says, it was preached in answer to another of the 15th Jany., 1642, the "licencious looseness of a seditious tongue" as the title calls it; of such foul schism and faction did our pulpits ring "of late."

Whilst these above dates are all 1642, the license to print on the usual fly-leaf reads:—Imprimatur Tho. Bristol, 22nd Jan., 1643. This shows the date of the preaching by modern style as January, 1643. The license being so quickly obtained, suggests an intention to print at once, necessarily, as there was no press at Bristol, either in London, or at Oxford; but remembering, perhaps, that he was surrounded by "faction and furious sedition," the author chose rather to withhold it. After the change of masters by the surrender of Bristol at the end of July, 1643, his loyalty had full scope, so it happened presently, when the press came, he was both able and ready to print. In his own words in the introduction, he says:—The press being "now" brought to Bristol, gave opportunity to some to urge him to publish. With the original was also printed—a corollary—"not then delivered," with the sermon, as the book tells us, but as the title page says—"now added."

The text for the sermon was from Job 34, 18: Is it fit to say to a King, 'Thou art wicked.' The corollary is—If it be unlawful to smite a King with the tongue, how much more so to take up arms against him. A marginal note reads:—With this controversy, i.e., the war, "I meddled not when the sermon was preached." All these little intimations mark the delay between the preaching and the publishing, and thus show how from its having been prepared in January, this "invective discourse" was ready, and so became the first fruit of the Bristol press. Towgood was Somerset born, and later became vicar of Weare.

The sermon, never printed, "a singular masterpiece of furious sedition," which produced Towgood's sermon, was by one Doleman, chaplain to Col. Fiennes: the text was from Ps. 94, 20—Shall the throne of iniquity have any fellowship with thee which frameth mischief by a law?

The next thing, which fairly dates itself, is perhaps an example of the "scandalous reports" which so annoyed the London letter writer. It is—

A declaration made at Bodmin, 21st Nov., 1643.

Bristoll, printed by Robert Barker, &c., 1643.

This would be sent up to the press as quickly as possible, and may be placed as printed not long after its date.

Two or three other things, Bristol printed, will be noticed in the list of Civil War tracts dated 1643, all, however, are really early in 1644.

The True Informer, No. 4, 17th May, 1645, says that at Bristol the printers were printing his majesties large declaration concerning the treaty of Uxbridge to be sent abroad to all foreign parts; but there seems to have been little to do in pamphlet form in this year. One may be mentioned, a private issue, entitled :—Newes from the king's bath, etc., by R. P. Printed at the author's charge about the end of June. The necessity for or possibility of this press ceased with the surrender of the city in September. It must not be supposed that Barker was personally present; his firm had the patent as king's printers, and so had the privileged work. When printing for private persons for payment, the Barker name is not on the imprint, only when working for the king; thus this press was really a private affair, although it did occasional other work. It was long before a trade press could be publicly established. A glance at Prynne's books of this date will show how difficult his position was, so many things being issued anonymously, and without the printer's name. Yet Prynne found himself imprisoned.

It was not unusual to put a false imprint on the titles, to throw off suspicion or to give trouble. Two such may be noticed. One is entitled :—The souldiers demand showing his miseries, etc.

Bristol, printed in the year of intended parity. 1649.

Another issue reads :—The declaration, vindication and protestation of Edward Dobson, etc.

Bristoll, printed in the year 1664.

Both these are spurious: there was no press there at these dates.

Not only was printing impossible, but bookselling was not without risk. In October, 1663, the State papers tell us the Deputy-Lieutenants, with militia, searched the house of Richard Moon, bookseller in Bristol, found and burned Annus Mirabilis (Vol. iii, p. 51), and the Seven years prodigies, and sent Moon to prison.

In the British Museum is a single sheet, the oath of a Bristol burgess, bearing a manuscript date 1672, queried as Bristol printed, and another single sheet, the will of Andrew Barrett, 1672, and others of 1680 and 1681, but, although appearances are in favour, the suggestion can hardly be accepted. During the great unrest of the time of James II, books and pamphlets against him and his plans were constantly issued, notwithstanding the vigorous efforts made to stop them. Had there been any local press it would have been difficult, notwithstanding all risks, to have kept it still during Monmouth's progress in 1680, or during the rebellion in 1685. Jefferies, could he have found a chance, would not have spared a printer. In a sham—Final Address and Confession—attributed to him, printed in 1689, he is made to say: "Curse on my fortune that ever I was born in a time of printing. By St. Judas I hope he that invented this heretical art is in that place where I fear to be before long." After the Revolution of 1688, and the gradual feeling of greater liberty, the restrictions against the press were allowed to expire in 1695. Thus it is that in this year occurs the first Bristol trade issue. It is entitled—

An essay on the state of England in relation to its trade, etc.
By John Cary.

Printed by W. Bonny. November.

8vo., Bristol, 1695.

This was divided and reprinted in London in quarto in 1696. Several Bristol things occur in 1696, and the press has since been continuous there.

These remarks, hitherto, rather outside the county, have arrived at last to the first Somerset issue, locally printed—some sermons by John Moore, curate of Brislington, printed at Bristol 1696.

But the influence or impetus which brought the press into Somerset came from Exeter rather than from Bristol. Bristol fell into the hands of the Parliament on the 11th September, and the press must have moved very quickly. Mercurius Civicus, No. 123, October 1st, 1645, says—From Exeter the intelligence is that the printing press that has passed so many places since the war began as, first from London to York, then from Shrewsbury to Bristol, is now come to Exeter, and Master Fuller's book of meditations is finished for malignant Hunt; and Christopher Jenks, the corrector for the King's printer's agent is at Exeter, and preparing to send his press to some other place, for if Sir Thomas Fairfax march thither he will go away as he did from Bristol.

This earliest thing, finished before 1st Oct., was :—Good thoughts in bad times, etc. By Thomas Fuller.

Exeter, printed for Thomas Hunt.

16mo., 1645.

In the dedication, Fuller says—Accept these grapes, if not for their goodness, for their novelty, being the first fruits of Exeter press.

The next perhaps was—A copy of a petition to the peace-making association, etc., in the west, by Colonell Blake and Col. Pyne, etc.

Exeter. Imprinted in the year 1645.

The name of the printer is not given on either of these.

Another is :—Certain prayers fitted to severall occasions. To be used in his majesties armies and garrisons. Published by his highnesse command.

Printed by Robert Barker and John Bill, printers to the King's most excellent majesty.

B.L. 4to., Exeter, 1645.

In the list of Prynne's works is one issued anonymously and without printer's name, but pretending to be :—Printed at Exeter, 1648. The subject certainly refers very much to Exeter, but it is really aimed at the power and the proceedings of the army. Had the author or printer been known dire punishment would have followed, and any printer or press in Exeter could have been easily discovered. This imprint must be considered false.

Very strangely, in 1688, on the arrival of the Prince of Orange at Exeter, he was able to find and use a press which must have been there although dormant. First there appeared a broadside :—

The speech of the Prince of Orange to some principal gentlemen of Somerset. Dated 15th Nov.

Exeter, printed by J. B. 1688.

Another was:—A form of prayer, etc. (for the Prince and Princess).

Exeter, printed by J. B. 4to., 1688.

Another is:—The general association of the gentlemen of Devon to his highness the Prince of Orange.

Exeter printed. 1688.

There was a boldness too with this printer, as there was yet another issue after the Prince had gone:—The Prince of Orange's speech to the lords, &c.

fol. Printed at Exeter. 1689.

After this there was a judicious silence, until the press was license free. It is remarkable, however, that instead of being ready in 1695 as would be expected, three years elapsed before the first known thing was issued. It is entitled:—

Bread for the poor, or a method shewing how the poor may be maintained. By R. D.

Exeter, printed by Samuel Darker. 4to., 1698.

Soon now the press spread into Somerset, and with this point comes a new interest, the local newspaper.

NEWSPAPERS.

THE first near local newspaper was—The Bristol Post Boy. The earliest copy known is No. 91 of Aug., 1704. If it were issued regularly this would give 1702 as the year of first issue.

In a letter dated August 1st, 1706, by Thomas Tanner, afterwards bishop of St. Asaph, to Browne Willis, it is written:—"I am told they print also now a weekly paper at Exeter." (N & Q, 5 S, ix, p. 12). Just noting that the writer was only "told" this but otherwise did not know, it must be passed as not proven.

In the midst of strong political feeling, Philip Bishop started a newspaper at Exeter which he called—The Exeter Mercury; No. 1 being dated 24th Sept., 1714.

A rival called:—The Protestant Mercury or Exeter Post Boy, was started 16th Sept., 1715, by Joseph Bliss.

These papers ceased before 1720.

In 1723 Samuel Farley commenced a new paper—Farley's Exeter Journal. The earliest copy known is of the 14th May, 1725. It ceased in 1729.

Next to be noted is—The Postmaster or the loyal Mercury—started by Andrew Brice. Brice, a man of strong character, was soon in trouble, and was summoned before the Parliament for some remarks in his issue of Friday, 28th Nov., 1718. After this episode the issue seems to have stopped for a while, or to have been irregular, as No. 16 is dated 11th Nov., 1720. It ceased 23rd April, 1725, being stopped by the new stamp duty. The next week Brice started anew with—Brice's Weekly Journal, No. 1, 30th April, 1725. In the last issue of the Postmaster, 23rd April, he says—"I have the sorrow to acquaint my readers that by reason of the duty of 1d. on every sheet and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. on every half-sheet, I must raise the price $\frac{1}{2}$ d., and in future the new journal will be a half-sheet only." As some encouragement, he added that he had taken care to procure the size so large and the print so fine and curious that the contents would be rather more than formerly in the old sheet and a half ordinary. The Journal ended in 1731. There are some copies of this in the Exeter Institution, and there is one copy in the British Museum, No. 257, Feb. 6th, 1729-30.

Brice advertised in 1726 a scathing and characteristic pamphlet on the management of Ilchester gaol:—An appeal to justice, etc. This would now be of great interest, especially in connection with a similar enquiry instituted by Henry Hunt a century later. Unfortunately Brice was in trouble for printing an attack on the governor of his own local gaol, and so perhaps the Ilchester pamphlet was never issued. Not having met with it, the title is placed under Taunton in 1726, to record it; and also as it shows John Dinning as Brice's agent at Taunton for his Weekly Journal.

Feeling the effects of opposition, Bliss announced in his issue of the Protestant Mercury of the 2nd March, 1716:—

"By reason that Bishop continues to oppose me in the sale of my news in the town of Taunton, this is to give notice that I design in a few days to be there with a printing press in order to serve the said town and print the same twice a week if encouraged." This threat was never carried out, although it may have had some influence. Instead of Bliss in 1716 came William Norris in 1718. The first work of this Taunton press, the first Somerset press, is:—The lawfulness of taking oaths, etc., by Francis Squire. It will be noticed that Squire's previous publications are from Exeter until 1717, and he now makes a rush to be first in at Taunton. Excepting Bath where the press appeared in 1729, for thirty years this was the only press in Somerset, the next being found in 1747 at Yeovil. After the experiences, quarrels, troubles, and failures of the Exeter ventures, it would hardly be imagined that anyone could wish to start a journal at Taunton, just too with the coming of the new stamp act; yet the attempt appears to have been made. In the historical memoirs of Tiverton by Martin Dunsford, printed at Exeter, 1799, a note at the foot of page 169 says, in reference to the origin of the name Tiverton—see also Norris's Taunton Journal for July 15th, 1726, wherein is published a letter from a gentleman of Tiverton, and in the Journal for 23rd September, 1726, another letter from Collipriest, and another 16th September, 1726, to which the writer signs his name John Blundell. Again, Edward Jeboult in his history of Taunton, p. 83, printed 1873, mentions this Journal as if he had seen it, and as being first issued on Friday, 21st May, 1725. Every effort has been made to find a copy but without success. A special visit to Tiverton resulted in failure, as also a special visit to Exeter, where it was hoped some reference may have been found in Brice's Journal, of which there are some of this date in the Exeter Institution. In Oct., 1726, Brice advertised Sir Richard Cock's farewell charge given at the Easter Sessions in Gloucester, a single sheet, price 2d., to be had of John Dinning in Taunton. There was frequent communication with, and there are often references to Taunton, but no mention of Norris's Journal.

A pamphlet (see Farmer) printed by W. Norris undated, but about 1732 was "sold by the printer hereof, and by the men who carry the Gloucester Journal." The Gloucester Journal, established in 1722, was at this time the only paper of mark circulating in the district, and Norris being the Taunton agent to whom buyers went, the thought arose that it may have become known locally as Norris's Journal, but a search through the early files of the Gloucester Journal for the three letters from Tiverton proved the contrary; they are not there. Waiting and hoping thus for confirmation, Norris's Taunton Journal was not placed at the head of the newspaper list, where, after investigation, the evidence seems to warrant that it should be.

Why caution is sometimes necessary will be seen from the following recent incident. In the classified index of subjects to the Gentleman's Magazine, the volume on Popular Superstitions, issued in 1884, mention is made, p. 247, of the Frome Daily Journal of 15th January, 1731. This statement was startling, as it implied a press already at Frome, and an issue of a daily newspaper there. On making a direct reference to the Magazine, Vol. 1, No. 1, January, 1731, on page 29, under the heading—On credulity in witchcraft—there is an account of a transaction that "happened at Frome in Somersetshire in September last (i.e. 1730), and was published in the Daily Journal." In the subject index, p. 247, as above noted, the Daily Journal of the Magazine becomes the "Frome Daily Journal." In the Magazine there is no mention of such a Journal. There were three daily issues in London at this time, and in one of these, the "Daily Journal," 15th January, 1731, the story can be found.

Although Exeter influenced the coming of the press into Somerset, it was eventually from Sherborne, through Yeovil, rather than the newspaper came. Thus the Sherborne Journals have had place given them in the list. Like the Gloucester Journal on the other side of the county, it is surprising to find how far the Sherborne issue was carried. A little book by Anthony Moore, printed at Falmouth in 1758, advertises itself as sold by the printer, and by the men who carry the Sherborne paper. In the Dorchester and Sherborne Journal and Western Advertiser, 15th Feb., 1793, an advertisement announced that on Saturday, 2nd March, 1793, would be published weekly—The Taunton Herald and Western Advertiser. Printed by Thomas Norris. Except that the printer's name is given this might be thought an offshoot of the Sherborne Journal, the advertisement being therein and the name so similar, the title only being somewhat changed to give it local interest. No copy has been met with, but Jeboult, p. 84, mentions it and implies that it existed in 1794.

But after all Taunton (excepting Bath) did take the lead in Somerset with the Taunton Courier in 1808. The list of newspapers as given, very difficult to make and probably imperfect, will show generally the rise and progress of this interest. In or about 1850, was introduced a new system for the provincial press, which much aided its increase. This was the partly-printed plan, by which any part, or one side, of the sheet is made up and printed in London, and so distributed throughout the land. The news is without name or dates as it must be usually several days old and must be used for papers published in widely different districts and on different days. Also the supply required must be ordered some days before delivery. Some curious episodes have occurred under this plan, as when by failure of delivery from London the local journal has had to appear confessed with its London or foreign news absent, and one side of the sheet blank.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

THE sermons and theology of local interest during the Civil War are under that heading.

With the greater liberty of thought and stubborn feeling of independence of the Commonwealth time, sectaries as they were called increased rapidly, every extreme being in fact a protest against something that had been. Of these the Quakers, Baptists, and Independents we have still with us. The Quaker pamphlets are certainly most curious and interesting, a literature which could hardly be equalled: the story of their oppression, quietude, and success, a most eventful history. The first seen was John Audland, who appeared in Bristol 12th July, 1654, in the evening, and after "testifying" passed on into Devon. Mightily pressed in spirit he returned to Bristol in September, and with him John Camm. The chief writers here are:—Speed, Nayler, Collier, Farmer, Bishop, Westfield, Morford, Salthouse, Batt, Anderdon, Chivers, Caton, and John Whiting.

The Church people too had plenty of strong reading and argument from Sclater, Jeanes, Fras. Freeman, Crooke, Fullwood, Roberts, Thomas, Cradock, and Newton.

An advertisement of 1655 shows us how old a custom may be. It is in the Faithful Scout and reads:—If any young preachers want any new sermon let them repair to R. W., dwelling at the White Friars in the city of Gloucester, and there they may have manuscripts, and receive directions how to refute all errors and heresies for forty years past and forty years to come, provided always they are such men as are well approved.

THE RESTORATION.

On the restoration, the Act of Uniformity produced the first Nonconformity. Of the many clergy ejected from their livings (see Calamy), Joseph Alleine became a noted writer. Of his work "An Alarm," etc., 20,000 copies were sold and 50,000 more of the same work, under the title of "A sure guide to heaven," etc. Another writer was John Humfrey, vicar of Frome, of whose works a fair list is given, and the titles of these will show better than any comment exactly the feelings, and wishes, and hopes, dominant in these men. It was not separation they wished for, but a reformation which should enable them to return. Humfrey had the peculiar distinction of surviving all the others ejected.

Under James II the high claims of the Crown were again revived, to be again met with strong opposition. The prominent writings are thus found to be now against popery and arbitrary power and the possibility of a standing army under the command of a bigoted popish duke. Pamphlets and sermons had so increased in number that in 1681 they became a dread to the powers. Every bookseller's stall was loaded with them, and they were hawked and cried about the streets like ballads. There is not much to note locally, except the result, the rebellion under Monmouth in 1685, and the sermons on the thanksgiving which followed the defeat. (Vol. III, pp. 56, 57, 58).

With the accession of George I in 1714, political feelings were still very strong. Church literature is urging claims for episcopal succession, preaching constantly the unreasonableness of separation, always against dissent.

Assize sermons came into vogue, strongly political, preaching obedience, and carefully setting forth duty to the higher powers, and the advantages of church and state. (Potter, Squire, Bedford, Atwood, Hody, Hill, Hole, Pages, Coney, Lobb). Nonconformity, too, was running strong under oppressive disadvantages. Here all ideas of succession are discarded as a groundless fancy, and it is claimed that a christian people had authority to choose their own ministers. (Grove, Brydges, Davisson, Amory). A discussion which commenced at Exeter about the Trinity, ended in a split in that congregation (Stogden, Peirce, Foster, Fawcett), and the appearance of Unitarianism at Taunton, especially under Joshua Toulmin, who was so long an influence there.

The want of unity, of a governing centre, which must have been greatly detrimental to Nonconformity, was now to be removed by the coming of John Wesley. An ordained clergyman of the church, he started a method, a union, and thus his system was strengthened, and being simple has flourished under every censure. (Free, Halliday, T. A., Wesley, J.)

A little later, following in the same course of protest against neglect, came another reformer, principally, locally at least, on the question of village education, viz., Miss Hannah More.

HANNAH MORE.

COMING from Bristol and already a successful writer, Miss Hannah More settled at Wrington. In 1793 was printed the little local thing, Village politics, etc., by Will Chip, and this proving a great success a continuance of similar things in some form was suggested. Consequently in March, 1795, appeared the first number of the Cheap Repository. The idea was to supplant the "corrupt vicious little books and ballads which have been hung out at windows in the most alluring forms or hawked through town and country," "the impious and immoral pamphlets dispersed over the kingdom by societies of infidels and republicans, vitiating the tastes of the lower classes, and so highly mischievous to the community as to require every attention to counteract them." The first issue—single sheets in ballad form, sixteen of them, were afterwards printed in the tracts. The issue was monthly on two qualities of paper, one being coarse. Some were priced 1½d. The penny ones on coarse paper were sold 24 for 10d., the ½d. ones on coarse paper 48 for 9d.—with allowances. Those signed Z or L are by Hannah More. Each tract has a woodcut or cuts, but these sometimes differ on different editions. They were divided into histories, poems, and Sunday readings; "the longer tales being well suited for the use of boarding schools." Two millions, at ½d. and 1d. each were sold the first year, besides a great number in Ireland. They were also distributed gratuitously to hawkers and placed in stalls at fairs. "Hark," writes one in 1797, "Hark, whose voice is that, etc., it is an hawker selling Mrs. More's Cheap Repository Tracts." This was not at the time a common custom, but was found to be successful.

As attention was directed to these little things it became evident that there were often several and differing issues. After continuous watching the list as worked out here will probably be a surprise. Some it will be seen were greater favourites than others, and presumably from the constant change in publishers, different risks were taken in the different editions. For easy finding they are arranged under the first consonant in the title name—omitting the article. As nearly all are without date, a chronological plan could not be attempted.

They ceased in 1798, but the plan was copied by a society at Chelsea, and also by another at Dumfries known as the Scottish Cheap Repository.

These tracts were the first systematic issue of their sort, the beginning of the greater tract system, which has developed, and is still strong, as it is the most profitable and most certain of all forms of publishing. Of late too, when everything is paid for, a "society" exists for publishing pet sermons, and so we may expect to get them from time to time reprinted in our newspapers.

Seeing the neglected and poor condition of her village neighbours, Mrs. More started the village school. The tiny printed thing, the first book, the questions and answers for the Mendip schools, is little more than an inch square. It is surprising that even one copy has survived. The opposition she met with, and the general story, will be seen in the pamphlet war which ensued. For better reference these pamphlets have been gathered and placed under her name.

GEOLOGY.

UNDER this heading, Somerset having a fine field of interest, has also first place in its literature. In 1667, Joseph Glanvill, vicar of Frome, afterwards of Bath, appears in the early Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society, with some notes relating to the mines of Mendip. This is the first intimation of any thought on the subject. Glanvill, a very cultured man, seems to anticipate, in 1661, in his Vanity of dogmatising, the possibility of the electric telegraph. "To confer," he writes, "at the distance of the Indies, by sympathetic contrivances, may be as natural to future times as to us is a literary correspondence." He next, in 1670, printed his propositions for carrying on a philosophical correspondence already begun in Somerset in connection with the Royal Society. Bath, where he was rector, was to be the Somerset centre. A mining district must then have been the most favourable for observation, and it would seem that Glanvill's notes started the subject publicly, and led to further developments from his neighbours and probable already correspondents.

In 1679, Mr. J. Beaumont, of Stone Easton, wrote in the Philosophical Transactions on the mines of Mendip and the rock plants in lead mines. In 1693, Mr. Beaumont again wrote—On the theory of the earth,—in reply to a work by Dr. Thomas Burnett. Burnett's work, printed in 1690, is simply an account of the flood and a computation of what quantity of water would be necessary to make it; with the conclusion that the common opinion or explanation was not intelligible. Beaumont writes of the earth:—our first geologist. In his dedication he says—"my thoughts following the great enigma of the world as to the size, tendency, and periods of it, these points are all considered in this work: when we are first initiated into religion we have a doctrine delivered as concerning them which by faith we receive, and in which, as in duty bound, we acquiesce. Nevertheless, as we grow in years, the mind urged on by strong and luxuriant instincts, falls naturally considering how far they may be resolvable by human reason."

Again—Oldmixon, in his History of the Stuarts, printed in 1730—p. 287—says, he had been twelve years preparing a history of Somerset, "the perfecting of which as useful and pleasant as it would be, has been and is still impeded purely by the prejudice of party and a private jealousy too mean to be mentioned."

In 1719, Mr. John Strachey, in the Philosophical Transactions, was the first to appear with a theory of the strata in coal mines as gathered from his own observation. In 1727 he printed a separate little work on these strata, the first issue from anywhere on the subject.

After this, but very slowly, came some notes from others, the flood being still in the way, until the time of William Smith in 1815, Strata Smith as he has become, the father of modern geology, whose first observations were made in Somerset. Since then the work, advanced work, has been done by Moore, Sanford, and Winwood. The local workers are strangely few in so interesting a field.

TOPOGRAPHY.

TOPOGRAPHY seems to be the last subject to come into notice. Early notes on locality are found in general travels, but the first general survey of the county comes in 1727 in Cox's Magna Britannia: reprinted as a History of Somerset in 1742 at Sherbourne. In 1782 Richard Locke, a curious man, advertised a history. Collinson mentions how little he got from him and nothing has come. In 1791 Collinson printed the history known under his name, and besides these we have Billingsley, Toulmin, Rutter, Warner, and Tunnicliff. Under this heading some interesting facts must be recorded.

In 1681, R. Plott, in his History of Staffordshire, p. 251, says, writing of some toads found underground:—"But of these no more, because I am unwilling to prevent the ingenious Mr. Beaumont now most laudably designing the natural history of Somersetshire.

Again, in the English historical library, by W. Nicolson, it is written:—"The natural history of Somerset has been long looked for from Mr. Beaumont, who is a person of that known ingenuity that the world has just cause to hope for a most excellent performance. I wish his late more noble considerations as he calls them have not enlarged his thoughts too much for the finishing a work of so narrow a compass. Beaumont in his dedication to his theory of the earth acknowledges his enlarged thoughts, and explains why his plan was abandoned. "A few years ago," he writes, "I was upon another design, but an ill-juncture happening I laid it by, nor has it been any way uneasie to me to have been baulked in writing the natural history of a county, the considerations in hand being far more noble and of more general extent."

In 1736 came out proposals for printing Somersetshire illustrated, etc. (John Strachey), but from this nothing has come.

Again, another curiosity. In the Gough topography, in the Bodleian library, vol. 2, p. 189, is a printed prospectus in folio of—An introductory essay to a natural history of Somerset, etc. (see Stephens, J.) The date is 1761, the work the prospectus says already in the press, and to be ready by the end of the year. It was to consist of eight chapters:—1, a general description of the county; 2, its antiquities; 3, the soil and its cultivation; 4, the vegetables; 5, the minerals; 6, the animals; 7, the inhabitants; 8, the trade and manufactures, with a scheme for the cultivation of flax and madder in the county.

About 1824, Dr. Samuel Allen, master of Sydney House School, Bath, announced—The beauties and antiquities of Somerset, with engravings,—but it has not been met with.

In 1827, James Savage issued a prospectus of a new work which has not appeared.

The rev. Thomas Hugo, a skilled worker at our Records, a man of great industry and perseverance in such work, accumulated much historical material more especially relating to his own favourite district of Taunton. These collections, used and unused, are now in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 1876-1881). To the Somerset Archæological Society Mr. Hugo contributed accounts or histories of the Somerset nunneries, but the space which could be allotted to him in the volume of Proceedings being limited his work was necessarily reduced, so that he determined if possible to publish fuller accounts in a separate form, intending to include also the monasteries or houses for men. For himself there was no subject of greater interest, it was a wide field of "delightful investigation" for which he had conceived "a morbid fondness." Consequently, although these works are models of skilled labour and free references, there is just a bias in intention caused by over zeal, and a declared "affectionate admiration."

Towards the republication he issued a circular prospectus in 1863—4pp. folio—containing his propositions. Mynchin Buckland, Cannington, Mynchin Barrow, and White Hall in Ilchester only were thus reprinted and issued in one volume as the Mediæval Nunneries of Somerset. In this issue, Mr. Hugo considered their histories exhausted. At the end of the volume is a list of the traditional houses of which little or nothing is known.

Of the other houses Athelney alone was left somewhat in form, and has since been printed in the Som. Arch. Proceedings.

Notes for the histories of the other large houses remain still to be worked up.

Mr. Hugo's own wish was to commence this enlarged issue with a second edition of Taunton Priory as he had collected so much additional matter, but fate determined otherwise and these Priory notes still await an editor.

Mr. Hugo also issued a single sheet—8vo.—announcing as "Preparing for publication the history of the town and neighbourhood of Taunton from the earliest times to the accession of Queen Elizabeth." His researches, he adds, had "yielded a most abundant harvest of curious and interesting details." "Many of the narratives have all the particularity peculiar to the modern journal instead of the meagreness usually associated with such works." This result of laborious investigations was to embrace (1) The town of Taunton. (2) The impropriated parishes of Taunton priory. (3) The Hundred of Taunton Dean. (4) The parishes neither impropriated to the priory nor contained in the Hundred but within five miles of Taunton.

This too remains awaiting the industry, skill, and perseverance of some local enthusiast.

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

Acts of Parliament are divided or classified into—General Public acts—Local and personal acts—Private acts printed, which may be used as evidence—and Private acts, not printed.

There are two records of every public statute—the parliamentary roll and the final roll in Chancery. There is only one record of a private act—the parliamentary roll, which is a transcript engrossed on parchment and retained in the parliament library at Westminster. The earliest printed acts are of Hen. VIII, but as separate acts hardly any before Anne. It might be supposed that one or both houses of Parliament would have complete collections or sets of all private acts, but such is not the fact—there is no such collection anywhere. Any list must with fair certainty be imperfect. Up to the time of Hen. VIII private acts may be found on the rolls and in part to the end of Elizabeth, but after this titles only are recorded. Now the title only appears in the statutes, and if not printed the act can only be found on the engrossed roll. Purely private acts are printed at the cost of the parties and are not distributed. Beyond the parties, a few are claimed by certain doorkeepers and are sold by them.

GENERAL.

Of the apparitions, wonders, and dreadful judgments; of the agriculture, manufactures, coaches, waggons, canals, railways, and roads, the index will sufficiently speak. Of the roads, however, it must be noted that McAdam (q.v.), after announcing his system, made his first essay in Somerset. The first macadamized road was made between Bath and Bristol.

The Exmoor Scolding (Moreman, W.) could not be omitted. This was first printed in Brice's Weekly Journal at Exeter, a first portion the 2nd June 1727 and a second part 25th August 1727. Reading Brice's Journal with familiarity it will be seen how much of it he wrote himself, and it will be perceived that the Scolding as printed in 1727 was compiled and written by him. In 1746, nineteen years afterwards, Brice's Journal being long defunct and forgotten, the Scolding appeared again in more available form in the Gentleman's Magazine but now associated with a new piece, the Courtship, different in subject and consequently in tone and language. The Courtship appeared in the number for May, 1746, and the Scolding in July. The two pieces taken from the magazine were issued in book form in the same year, and so have been only jointly known. The writer of the introduction to the book, not knowing, implies that these pieces were collected originally from a blind itinerant fiddler, one Peter Lock, and so with his name, they have since been associated. Both however were anonymous, and as the Courtship first appeared so long after the Scolding it is probably by another hand.

About 1841 the old doctrines and claims, and ritual of Laud, began to be revived (Skurray) to be denied as before (Turner). By 1850 this controversy remained very much with Denison, Ditcher, Grueber and Bennett.

At this time, too, came Brother Prince and the curious issues from the Agapemone.

The strong political tracts of Thomas Spencer, of this date, must not be overlooked.

Of the other works of varied character, note those of Langhorne, Speke, Fielding, the Kinglakes, E. A. Freeman, and the Eltons. John Locke, although born in the county, after the earliest childhood, had no connection with it,—never lived or wrote in it. But as he is so often mentioned, his collected works are inserted, and works relating to his life, for general information. Andrew Crosse, who considered the electric light a possibility, must be especially remembered. Herbert Spencer, too, now the world's philosopher, made his first essay in Somerset, but since then has been absent. With these may be associated Elworthy and Tylor, both still happily with us.

BATH.

ALTHOUGH Somerset as a county takes typographical precedence over all others with a Caxton of 1480, Bath can take precedence in the county with Chaucer's Wife of Bath, first printed by Caxton in 1476, followed by another issue by Pynson in 1493, and this again by another by Wynkyn de Worde in 1498. This favourite story was adopted as a chap book in 1600, but, retaining in this edition the original expressions or wording, it was considered popish and condemned. Afterwards reformed, it had frequent issues down to modern times (see Wife). Some of the titles to this little thing tell the story almost as well as the poem itself.

Save for the above well known piece, Bath literature, as may be supposed, begins with works on the

HOT MINERAL WATERS.

THE story of Bladud, the reputed discoverer, appears in 1587, when we are told how attempting to fly he fell and broke his neck. The first printed work specially relating to the baths is by William Turner, dean of Wells, being part ii of his Herbal, printed at Cologne in 1562, and again in 1568. So little were the waters cared for, that he had not heard that any rich man hath spent upon these noble baths one groat these twenty years. The next work after Turner was a curious and pretty thing in 1572, in black letter, by John Jones, physician, entitled, The bathes of bathes ayde, &c. In this the pedigree of Bladud is traced back to Adam.

Jones deserves
Both double prayse and fame,
That took such paynes for common health
This ayde of baths to frame.

Turner's work was reprinted in 1586—1587—1596—1599—1613, by Thomas Vicary, who signs himself, Sergeant-surgeon to King Henry VIII, so not to be confounded with others, outsiders.

Physitians all men faine themselves—
Priests, monks, jews, barbers, fools,
Stage players, women, multitudes
That never learned in schools.

Nothing new appeared, so Turner held the ground until 1620, when was issued the first purely local work, entitled, Via rectam ad vitam longam, &c., by Tobias Venner. This treats not only of the use of the baths, but has also observations for the preservation of health, the true use of sleep, exercise, air, and nourishment. Venner, who was "physician at Bath in the spring and fall, and at other times in the haven town of Bridgwater," printed in 1621 a treatise on tobacco, "which many in these days do too licenciously use." He remained the one local author until 1631, when Edward Jorden published a discourse on natural baths and mineral waters and the generation of heat. This work is confined entirely to the subject matters of the title page. There was a second edition in 1632. In 1634 came Thomas Johnson with his Mercurius botanicus, &c. This treats somewhat of the uses and the times for using the baths, but also describes the city and gives a map and "cuts" showing the baths. A pretty little volume. Venner still quietly held his own and re-issued his work in 1637-1638. Vicary then came in again with a re-issue of Turner in 1641.

Nothing more appears for nearly ten years. Perhaps the unrest of the time of the Civil War may account for this. A curious notice of the effect on Bath is found in a pamphlet of 28th July, 1642, entitled, His majesty's demands, &c.: says the writer "the inhabitants of the citie of Bathe express great griefes in that they have had little company this summer. The poor guides now guide one another from the alehouse lest they should lose their practice. The ladies that are there are fallen into a lethargy for want of stirring cavaliers to keep them awake. Were it not for these nymphes the waters would lose their virtue. Pluto's cauldron had never lesse purboyled flesh in it to please the palate of his courtiers; and the poor fiddlers are ready to hang themselves in their stringes for a pastime, for want of other employment." In time, peace again reigned, and there appeared an advertisement in "Several Proceedings in Parliament," June, 1650, announcing that "there is in print an excellent treatise showing the best manner to attain a long and healthful life, with a very necessary treatise on the baths of Bath, and an accurate treatise concerning tobacco," by Tobias Venner, and published for the benefit of all such as yearly for their health's sake resort to these baths. In 1660 there was another issue of this, and the last.

A time of rest again ensued until Joseph Glanvill—the only other Bath author at this time—appeared in the Philosophical Transactions in 1669 with a notice of the Bath springs. This may have stirred up others somewhat, as in this year 1669 was issued a further edition of Jorden's work, with notes on his life, edited by Thomas Guidott, M.B., practising at Bath. Guidott was a new man, a dutchman, and destined to give great impetus to the use of these waters. Although thus judiciously first using the credit of Jorden, there is an appendix of his own to the work, and he afterwards showed full capability on his own account. Jorden remarked in his book, p. 150, "I hold the waters to be of great use inwardly and outwardly," but he adds, "I am sorry I cannot commend the inward use of them as they deserve in regard I can hardly be persuaded we have the water pure from the spring, as it may be mixed with the water from the bath." This suggestion of the drinking was taken up and worked by Guidott so that by 1673, Chapman's little work—Thermæ redivivæ—speaks of both the "bathing and drinking now so much in use." In this year 1673, Guidott, too, determined the matter by printing his—Quære concerning the drinking, &c., resolved.

Guidott, in his appendix to Jorden in 1669, writes—"the observations I make seem fitter, as they are intended, for a foundation to a greater work which time and variety of experiments must complete." Following this, in 1677, he published a discourse on the lives of Bath physicians, but this was not the greater work alluded to. In the London Gazette, 3rd June, 1686, is an advertisement that, whereas Dr. Thomas Guidott hath lately published proposals in order to the printing a latin discourse of the nature, virtues, and effects of the baths of Bathe, entitled, De Thermis Britannicis, he doth hereby give notice that the impression shall begin on the first of July next ensuing, and be finished in three months, according to the printed propositions which are to be had at the "Three Pigeons," in Cornhill, against the Royal Exchange. This promise was not kept, as on the 15th December, 1687, a year and-a-half afterwards, Dr. Thomas Guidott gives notice that his work—De Thermis Britannicis "shall be printed by Easter next. The charge being now subscribed, he hopes subscribers will be willing to pay 5s. at last, those not willing to advance the 2s 6d. may expect the book without the cuts." But again he did not keep his promise. In 1686 he published—A century of observation, &c., but the great De Thermis did not appear until 1691.

Guidott's other works speak for themselves, but it can be seen how much the value and fashion of the waters were due to him, and more especially the very important second handle which he gave them by the drinking or inward application.

One result of the drinking the waters was their being bottled and sold in London and elsewhere. Brice's Weekly Journal, Exeter, 31st March, 1727, announces Bath waters constantly supplied fresh. The County Journal, No. 202, 16th May, 1730, has an advertisement of—Bath waters brought to London by land carriage, the public having suffered a long time on account of their being brought by sea, often being many months before delivery. Advertiser had provided light wagons to bring the water quickly every wednesday, and it could be had thus fresh at his shop, the Golden Tea Canister, in Fleet Street. Price 7s. 6d. a dozen, "bottles and all." By another advertisement they were sold in Covent Garden, wholesale and retail, 7s. 6d. per dozen, 4s. half-dozen, sealed with the arms of the city and round it the name of the pumper. They could also be had of Mr. Wiltshire at the Bear Inn.

Dr. Robert Pierce, although, as he says, an inhabitant of Bath since 1653, appeared in print for the first time in 1685 in the Philosophical Transactions, with some notes on the use of Bath waters in palsy and barrenness; and in 1697, he published his Bath memoirs, &c. An interesting and very influential man, although not prolific in literature. The subject of the cure of barrenness here mentioned for the first time had long been and long was a valuable asset for the doctors in connection with these waters. The tone and character of much of the literature was not a little influenced by this fact. That tone now changes and widens and no longer treats so exclusively of the waters. Perhaps the larger influx of visitors with more varied diseases had some influence here. Of the new writers may be mentioned—Lister, Boyle, Floyer, and Allen, until in 1701, about the starting point of a new prosperity, appears George Cheyne on fevers, and many other works from him. Cheyne was famous in his day. Although having bad health as a boy, he grew to so enormous a size, weighing 32 stone, that he was obliged to have the whole side of his chariot made to open to receive him. By a milk and vegetable diet he reduced himself a third. The two doctors Oliver, men not to be forgotten, followed.

Amidst the many medical works on various subjects may be noted those of Wynter, Randolph, Smollett, Glasse, Canton, Lucas, Sutherland, and Wm. Falconer. Again later after 1800, the beginning of the century, the end of the play, there came in Gibbes, Spry, and the Falconers. Some two hundred medical writers can be counted hailing from this sportive city,

Where physics grave race in full regiments resort,
And the pale son of sin holds his annual court.

LITERARY.

THE literature of and the writers connected with Bath have been so often noticed, and written and talked about, that here, with so small a space at command, the subject becomes a difficulty.

The early books relate entirely to the baths and waters as already noted. Save a Quaker tract in 1659 (Morford, T.) until 1661 there is nothing else. In 1662-3-4-5-6 there is nothing. In 1666, coming from Frome, Joseph Glanvill became rector of Bath, and for four years 1666-7-8-9, and to 1673, and even to his death in 1681, he is the sole author who may be recorded. The time succeeding him could have known nothing of him or of his mind.

The coming and presence of Richard Nash in 1705 till his death in 1761 made Bath notorious and prosperous. The local tone of manners arising from local circumstances, and the diseases treated show in the publications. Many things issued too free to be preserved have not come down to us. From the list may be noted:—The insinuating bawd, by Ned Ward; and,—A step to the bath. In 1713, there is—A description, &c., by Nestor Ironside; in 1718,—From a lady, an account of the intrigues, &c.; in 1721,—The pleasures of the bath; in 1725,—Intrigues, &c., by Mrs. Manley; in 1733,—The lady's slip, &c.; and in 1735,—The Bath miscellany. In 1741 was issued,—Merryland described, &c.; this was read aloud at tea tables, and the demand required seven editions in three months. Although bearing a Bath imprint the first issue was supposed printed in London. In 1741, too, was printed, Coelias revenge by Mrs. Robinson, in answer to The lady's dressing room, by Dean Swift, which had given some offence. The Dean published a defence of his work arguing that cleanliness should always be observed, and that the indelicacy of his poem stimulated to care.

With 1730 came the appearance of some local publications, general or historical, distinct from the waters and from the company manners. (Dixon, Spurrell, Wilson). Poems and facetiæ however continued, the change worked very slowly.

The necessity for improvement and expansion brought on the scene an architect—John Wood—whose skill made the city architecturally much what we see it, and whose written Description and history, published in 1742-3, with all its faults will always be valued. With the better houses, wealth and fashion could be easily accommodated and the time of literary Bath commenced. It was now in 1744 was first printed the celebrated epigram, by Jane Brereton, on Nash between the two busts. Afterwards in 1775, in Pearch's collection of poems, this is attributed to the earl of Chesterfield. In 1756 Philip Thicknesse appears, a very quarrelsome, but very interesting man. In 1763 we have Mrs. Macaulay and Ralph Allen, and in 1766 comes Anstey with his New Bath Guide. This work, full of wit and humour, did much and still does much for Bath. It seems to be on the plan of Chaucer's Miller of Trumpington, whose hero is Symkyn.

Symkyn wolde no wyf as he sayde
But sche were wel i norished.

Another story, printed anonymously in 1715, called—The miller of Trumpington, being an exercise upon Chaucer's tale—has again Symkin for the hero.

Of Symkin's self and spouse and daughter
How the Manciple fell into the water.

Christopher Anstey, the author of the New Bath Guide, was born at Trumpington, and his hero again is Simpkin.

In 1771 appears for the first and for a short time only, Richard

B. Sheridan, with a little poem entitled, The Ridotto, published on the opening the new rooms. The occasion was evidently an important one. By the advertisement in the Bath Chronicle, 26th September, signed W. Wade, it is requested of "ladies and gentlemen who intend to honour the new rooms with their company at the Ridotto on Monday next to come dressed, the ladies with hoops and lappets, suit of cloaths or full trimmed sacks or negligees. The gentlemen either full dressed or French frocks. Officers in the navy or army in their uniforms to wear their hair en queue. It is also requested of the ladies and gentlemen who may be in mourning to appear in colours on that evening if it shall suit their convenience. There will be minuets, country dances, cotillons, &c., in the several rooms as may be agreeable to the company." About this time there were Edmund Rack, Lady Miller and her Batheaston villa coterie, Dr. Graham, Rauzzini, Priestly, Herschel, Bongout, Walcott, Sophia Lee, Dr. Henry Harington, Toulmin, Cruttwell, Mrs. Thrale (Piozzi), Randolph, and Warner. The theatre too was a noted centre, where the tyro often first courted applause and sometimes received his quietus—for "York, Bath, or Norwich ranked with Drury's scene." Here may be remembered Thos. Haynes Bayly; also Thos. Barker and the earliest lithography.

The visitors too, often writers of note, brought their own publications for local issue, thus adding further to the many men of rank, status, wealth, and education, who made up the general society, fashionable, refined, and literary, which, seeking conversation and social intercourse, flocked to and daily filled all the libraries.

These libraries—there were several—served the double purpose of meeting places for the literary, and for circulating, on the lending system, the chief books in demand.

The earliest known catalogue of books to be lent is of the gentlemen's and ladies circulating library in Crane Court, Fleet Street, 1745. But the plan was from the first cried down. A little pamphlet of 1746 writes of "a set of vipers lately sprung up like locusts, called Farthing Post libraries—supported on the ruins of literature, their subscribers, and the poor pitiful twelpenny subscribing coffee-house clubs." The writer then suggests, for these people, the erection of charitable free libraries for those who cannot pay their bookseller, landlord, tailor, or cook—the books "to be chained to prevent the pretence of having lent what was never possessed." But the system was older than these supposed earliest instances. Mercurius Fumigosus, No. 48, Wednes eve, April 25th, to Wednes eve, May 2nd, 1655, says:—Fumigosus having smoked a new business of taking in news books by the week, reading all for a penny or twopence, and returning them at the week's end, whereby his muse is much undervalued and himself both disheartened and impoverished, desires all to forbear the hiring books in this way:—

Lest that he steep his pen in vinegar and gall,
And next week write such lines shall shame ye all.

Sancho on too much reading: (Goulding, T.), in 1728, was vexed at what he saw in Bath. He writes—I look upon it to be a scandal for a young gentleman to be seen at a bookseller's shop in Bath the seasons being so short, because it shows a heavy, gloomy, dull capacity, that wants information, being incapable of thinking. Again he writes:—Sometimes in the season I can't avoid seeing Leake's shop crowded by all sorts that come for a short stay, and yet carrying so many books to their lodgings. Later, as showing another view and influence, a letter to Courtney Melmoth, dated 1777, says—One of the great corruptors of this age is a circulating library.

The plan however continued and flourished, so that in 1812 it was again written of Bath:—

Surely of books we've sufficient to show,
There's a place to buy wisdom at least every street in,
And the shops are more frequent for reading than eating,
Indeed all the libraries always are full.

In 1849 The Bathonian ceased being "borrowed not bought."

The beginning of the century was a busy time. In 1806 there were thirty-six publications. Amongst the writers were Bowdler, Peter Paul Pallet, Mangin, Trusler, Hunter, and Landor. No mean men. But a change rather suddenly came o'er the scene, the result a great decrease in the number of visitors, and a consequent decline in literary output. The old activity became of the past and is now resolved into history.

In 1825 Sir Geo. Gibbes opened the Literary Institution, and this with the Literary Club, the Philosophical Association, and the Antiquarian Field Club, just keep alive literary effort and old associations. From papers read before one of these societies have come two valuable little books on this literature by Monkland and Hunter, which should in no case be overlooked when seeking information on the subject.

THE PRESS.

A LITTLE quarto pamphlet, a poem, entitled,—Newes from the King's bath, by R. P. of Bath,—printed at the author's charge at the King's press in Bristol in 1645, is the first, the earliest thing locally or provincially printed connected with Bath. In Bristol in 1697, but this time at a trade press, was printed for Henry Hammond, bookseller in Bath, the Bath memoirs, &c., of Dr. Robert Peirce. There seems to be nothing further local until—The pleasures of the Bath, printed at Bristol in 1721. In 1725 Wynter's Cyclus metasyncritus is printed in London for J. Leake, and so also his work—On chronical disorders, &c., in 1728. Captain Goulding, who now comes prominently on the scene, printed his first works in 1728 in London. There seems nothing to guide a thought or to suggest the origin or starting of the press in Bath, except that Goulding, whose name appears as the author of the first thing printed there, may have had something to do with it.

The first thing to be found is entitled,—A Family Piece, &c., by Capt. Thomas Goulding. Printed by B. Lyon, near North Gate, 1729.

Goulding issued also an advertisement, a single sheet, Bath printed, that on the 17th September, 1729, Hurlo Thumbbo would be published at his shop opposite the Pump House.

A second part of the Family Piece was promised in October, 1729, and in October 1729 it was published, but strangely it was printed in London. Why so does not appear, possibly some differences may have arisen with the Bath printer.

From the preface to Goulding's Family Piece, and from the book itself may be gathered some account of the author. Seeing—he writes—the numerous assemblies of noble families and others, and so little diversion for them he had long concluded that better management was wanted to make Bath a place of "most vivacity in the whole world." Something different to balls, concerts, plays, and puppet shows. He determined therefore to make such improvement so that "the thoughts of coming to it shall be half the cure of the patient, and the virtues of the waters will do the other half." His first trial was a procession for the diversion of the Princess Amelia during her visit, at a cost to himself of many scores of pounds. He raised a Company of Grenadiers, and his work generally being approved by the Mayor and all loyal householders, they knowing him to be "naturally gay and a little extravagant, proposed my being what they call Captain." His enemies, or opponents, made a ballad on his work and called it Sham Loyalty; also they set it about that he must sell dear to be able to spend so much money and so freely. All a mistake, he retorted, as his father had a good estate within six miles, and he adds, "I thank God I have a good shop, and the goods are all my own. I am a tradesman. If any lady or gentleman should see the toy they like and they can buy it as cheap at my shop as any other, that shall be all the reward or favour I expect."

Being in London once, he got a petition handed to the Princess Amelia, asking her influence to get him made jeweller to the Prince of Wales, "intirely my own way of business;" but nothing came of it.

For a long time it was thought that Capt. Goulding was a pseudonym of Lyon, the printer, but on closer examination—as it will now be seen—this does not seem to have been the case. Goulding himself explains the origin of his designation or title of Captain, and from the other general story it seems clear that at his shop, opposite the Pump House, he sold toys and jewellery, and also—if no others—his own books, one of these being the first printed at Bath.

In 1730 Lyon printed works for Spurrell, and for Dixon. An appendix to Dixon's work was printed at Bradford in 1734, by John Good, probably the very first attempt made there. A single sheet, an advertisement of Hutt's hoop petticoat, Bath printed 1730, has survived. After 1730 Goulding and Lyon disappear, and so does the press, until in 1733 Felix Farley begins printing at the Shakespear's Head without West Gate (see Gentleman). The Farley family, as printers, spread over the west country and supplied early work to Bristol, Exeter, Salisbury, and Bath. A table of distances in Bath was printed by Farley at Bristol in 1739. There was no further local movement until John Wood begins with his Origin of building, Bath printed by S. and E. Farley in 1741.

In the high time of literary prosperity, especially the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th centuries, good printing was done at Bath. This, it must be remembered, when the work of the provincial press was very limited. With this work the name of Cruttwell must be associated. Cruttwell appears to have introduced the special or large paper copy. To the edition of the bible, by Clement Cruttwell, 1785, large paper copies were added; and in 1797 to Tenhove's Medici Memoirs. In 1801 Warner's Excursions from Bath has certainly one such copy, as also has the 5th issue in 1810 of Dr. Hartley's work on man. Dr. Hartley came to Bath in 1742 and died in 1757. At first posthumous re-issues were hardly included here, but after-thoughts changed this intention. In 1819 Pierce Egan's walks, &c.; and in 1829, Wm. Collins' poems have large paper copies. These examples are generally not only on large but also on stouter or thicker paper, and serve well to show how much a book is improved by good material as well as by good work. But few copies were thus printed, and no information as a rule can be given regarding them. Large paper copies should have a wide margin all round the page, the inner or binding edge being the same width as the others, so that the most ruthless binder cannot cut down the outside edge narrower than the inside. The history of Somerset, by Collinson and Rack, has no really large paper copies. Twelve copies were struck off on thick paper, but the width is the same as in the well-known quarto, the difference, besides the thickness, being in the length, simply caused by a wide thumb-piece or bottom to the page, making the bound volumes appear folios. Any one of these so-called large paper copies could thus be easily cut down to the same size as the ordinary, the difference then being only in the paper.

As intercommunication by rail has become so easy, and the difficulty of getting space or renewing leases in London costly, printing works, with others, are gradually spreading out around. A provincial place of imprint may be now only the workshop of a London firm, producing work having no local interest. Messrs. Pitman and Sons, from their phonetic press, send off tons of material, and still bearing the imprint Bath, although of late produced at Twerton.

There was formerly an advertisement issued from Bath, offering to print by a "mutual and equitable plan." The plan was that the writer desiring to publish should take so many copies at a fixed price, the printer taking all other supposed risk. The plan brought tracts and small things from all parts, thus helping to increase the apparent local flood of this class of thing. These issues have given much trouble, but they are for the most part omitted, as, although locally printed, they have no connection whatever with Bath.

NEWSPAPERS.

NEWSPAPERS printed or issued elsewhere than at Bath, although bearing Bath as part of the heading were not considered to be included. As some however have been inserted two more may be mentioned:—The Bristol, Bath, and Somersetshire Journal, 1742; and a short-lived thing—The Bristol Spy and Bath Censor, 1838. The list as given will fairly tell its own story (see also Lewis, H.) In the names of places having newspapers as given in the Gent's Magazine, round the woodcut of St. John's Gate on the title, Bath appears first in 1744. These early journals were distributed by the carriers, by country butchers, buttermen, and others who in any way served the neighbouring gentlemen.

Bath nearly had a much earlier issue than 1744, as Captain Goulding in his book of 1729, already noticed, says:—"After my hurry is over I shall write the introductory letter in the Bath Mercury, &c. I expect all the publicans in Bath and the country adjacent, in return for my providing them with new diversions to take in Capt. Goulding's Journal or Mercury, which shall fly instead of being carried." Presumably he thought himself justified in this appeal, as on one occasion of his diversions about four thousand people assembled, so that both drink and food were exhausted.

SERMONS.

UNDER this head Bath has an early issue in 1593 (Hume, A.), and then nothing until 1624 (Web, G.) In 1682 comes Pleydell on loyalty and conformity, and Jack Presbyter reproved by Goulde. In 1690 is a sermon before the bishop by J. Norris, and in 1703 one in the Abbey before the Queen by R. Duke. Issues yet remain very few. In 1735 is one before the charitable commissioners by T. Bowyer, and another in 1742 when the hospital is brought to notice by Warburton. In 1745, Warburton and Lavington preach against rebellion and so mark a passing event. Some local character is given in 1750 by Bowen, who, when preaching for the benefit of the hospital, scolds against pleasure and gaming. The hospital is again to the fore in 1749 (Bayly, E.), in 1754 (Leybourne), and in 1759 (Olive, R.)

A new influence appears in 1768, with a conversion (F., W.), followed in 1770 by the Countess of Huntingdon's hymns. The life of the countess tells that the gospel was first preached in the "dark parish" of Barton St. David's in 1771. In 1789 appears William Jay, and in 1796 Richard Warner, a very different man, and with these two comes a large increase in the sermon issues. Warner's sermons, often with some purpose, were sometimes priced two shillings. The cost of some of the modern issues is supposed to be paid by zealous ladies. It were well to remember that—

Sermons like plays, some please us at the ear;
But never will a serious reading bear.

Utterances suitable for the pulpit rarely carry warrant for publication, and when published as pious essays simply become tracts and disappear. It was written of Bath about 1812—

Our churches with steeples are not very plenty,
But chapels and meetings—of them we have twenty;
Abounding with clergymen, ministers, teachers,
All very fine men and popular preachers.

A traveller passing at this time, noting the decay of the city and the falling off in the public amusements, attributed the fact to the preponderance of this class of literature. As he passed along the streets and looked at the booksellers' windows, "the ascendancy of this spirit was manifest by the many clerical portraits and the multitude of religious books on sale." Another visitor in 1812 found one set of public rooms closed and the Pump Room band discontinued for want of subscribers, the residents had withdrawn from the amusements, and so had destroyed the spirit of the place. Other writers, about 1840, found the place filled with sectarian bigotry, "infested by as canting and little-souled a race as ever thumped a cushion," and one notices the issue of a tract entitled—A few words of consolation, encouragement, and warning to the christian inhabitants of Bath under their present trial,—which he calls simply a collection of texts flung together pell mell. Another writer calls the place the "headquarters of fanaticism," and tells that the Horticultural Fête was preached at as being "a hot-bed of satan" (see Smallarms, Lud Hudibras, Philo Bladud, J. East, Clericus, Charity Ball). In the case of the Charity Ball, on the surplus being apportioned and distributed to the different institutions, it was in some cases refused and returned as being the produce of wickedness. And this where two-thirds of the visitors made a show of drinking the waters merely for a pretence to mix with the crowd in the Pump Room, to give a colour for being at a place where they expected really to find pleasure and amusement.

The "quality" and fashion sought other quarters, and the invalids finding that their gaiety and "vivacity" had been "half the cure" followed them.

For some years all seemed dead, former prosperity became a tradition, invalids were few, the literary effort very small, until in 1856 was issued a little work on the waters by W. Parker, which was followed in 1858 by another by Wm. Falconer, and the subject being taken up by R. W. Falconer, and others non-medicos, every effort has been made of late to revive an interest and to restore confidence in these springs. As a result there have been several new book issues during especially the last thirty years.

An appeal to the publick; or, a narrative of facts relating to the proceedings of a party of governors of the new general hospital at Bath, against Mr. Archibald Cleland (one of the surgeons of the said hospital), at an extraordinary meeting of the governors, held in their general committee room, the 21st of September, 1743. 8vo., 1743.

CLELAND, ARCHIBALD. To the thirteen governors of the Bath hospital who voted for my dimission on September 21st, 1743.

—— A letter to Mr. Archibald Cleland, surgeon at Bath: by Henry Johnson. s.s. fol., 1743.

—— A short vindication of the proceedings of the governors of the general hospital at Bath, in relation to Mr. Archibald Cleland, late surgeon to the said hospital. Wherein the several facts misrepresented in a pamphlet, call'd "an appeal to the publick," by Mr. Cleland, are fairly stated. To which is prefix'd a short narrative of the proceedings. By the governors of the hospital who voted for Mr. Cleland's dismission.

—— A review of two pamphlets lately publish'd. The one intitled, "an appeal to the publick, or a plain narrative of facts relating to the proceedings of the governors of the new general hospital at Bath, against Mr. Archibald Cleland, one of the surgeons of the said hospital"; and the other, "a short vindication of the proceedings of the governors in relation to the said Mr. Cleland." Together with some impartial remarks on the latter, and a justification of the author's own conduct in that affair. By John Trevanion, of Cheltenham, gent.

8vo., Bath, 1744.

—— A full vindication of Mr. Cleland's appeal to the publick; wherein the gross misrepresentations and falsehoods contain'd in a late pamphlet call'd, a short vindication of the proceedings of the governors of the general hospital at Bath, in relation to Mr. A. Cleland, late surgeon to the said hospital, will be clearly detected and expos'd. Addressed to the thirteen governors who voted for his dismission.

8vo., Bath, 1744.

—— A letter to Mr. Archibald Cleland, occasioned by his full vindication of his appeal to the public against the proceedings of the Bath hospital.

8vo., 1744.

2nd edit. 8vo., 1745.

—— Remarks on an appeal to the publick by Mr. Cleland, against thirteen governors of the general hospital at Bath; with respect to their suspending and dismissing him from his office as surgeon to the said hospital, upon the evidence of two notorious prostitutes. And on a letter to him (from a reverend advocate for the thirteen governors) occasioned by his full vindication of the said appeal. To which is annexed, extracts from the case of seduction relating to a French abbée's committing rapes upon 133 virgins, in order to shew the analogy of the partial proceedings against Mr. Cleland and the said abbée.

Preface signed, Britannicus.

DIXON, HENRY (schoolmaster at Bath). The English instructor; or the art of spelling improved. Being a more plain, easy, and regular method of teaching young children than any extant. In two parts. The first, containing monosyllables expressing the most natural and easy things to the apprehensions of children, with common words and scripture proper names alphabetically rang'd with their proper accent and divided according to the rules of orthography. The second, being an instruction more particularly designed for children of an higher class, such as have not only made some advances in their reading, but are capable of understanding and applying the rules there given, and contains observations on the sound of letters with the use of true pointing, and other things necessary for an English scholar. To which is added, a method of instruction out of the sacred writings and the catechism of our church. The whole being intermix'd with variety of exercises in prose and verse adapted to the capacities of children and design'd as well to instruct them in the duties of religion as to render the initiatory part of education easy, profitable, and delightful. Drawn up for the use of schools.

Printed for J. Hazard, near Stationer's hall, and J. Leake, bookseller at Bath. 12mo., 1727.

2nd edit. Printed for J. Hazard at the Bible, near Stationer's hall, and J. Leake, at Bath. 12mo., 1729.

23rd edit. 12mo., 1760.

50th edit. 12mo., 1810.

69th edit. sm. 8vo., 1823.

— A supplement to the English instructor. Being rules and directions for the good conduct and behaviour of young scholars: with precepts in verse in imitation of Lily's qui mihi. For the use of schools. To which are annexed bishop Kenn's hymns.

As the continual dropping of water softens the hardest stone, so the instructions of wise and good men, inculcated with labour, with patience, and perseverance, it is to be hoped will mollify and subdue the most refractory temper that is not quite lost, quite abandon'd to all sense of religion, virtue, and ingenuity. Printed by B. Lyons. 12mo., Bath, 1730.

— An appendix to the supplement of the English instructor; being a dialogue for the duties of religion. To which is annex'd, a conference on the same subject, between Theodora and Marietta, from the archbishop of Cambray's education of a daughter.

Printed by John Good. 12mo., Bradford (on Avon), 1734.
The printing is very rudely done, evidently an early attempt.

— The doctrines of repentance consider'd: by way of question and answer. Fitted to the meanest capacity.

12mo., Bath, 1744.

— A dissuasive from lying, chiefly as it relates to children and young people; the danger, tendency, and mischievous effects of it. By the author of the English instructor, or the art of spelling improv'd, &c.

12mo., Bath (175-.)

— The use and abuse of church music. (Not seen.)

— An exercise for children, on the inimitable virtues of Christ; collected from Mr. Burkit on the new testament, and converted into question and answer; interspersed with proper hints, enforcing the respective duties therein contain'd. For the use of schools. By the author of the English instructor, or the art of spelling improv'd, &c.

12mo., Bath (175-.)

— Moral essays; or, the wisdom of all nations. Being the proverbial sayings, maxims and sentences of the greatest and wisest philosophers, in all times, ages, and countries; digested under proper heads, with reflections on the same. Printed for the author.

12mo., 1760.

— The parent's and schoolmaster's spiritual assistant, for grounding their children and those under their care, in sound christian principles, according to the church of England; agreeable to the late Mr. Henry Dixon's instructions in the charity school at Bath, on Sundays; and the principal festivals in the evening, by the plan of Mr. Nelson's festivals, who recommended him. Wherein the baptismal vow, and the necessity of renewing it by confirmation is most usefully set forth. With remarkable observations on several passages of our Saviour's life, death, resurrection, and the second coming; adapted to the

To which by permission are added: singular cases, authentic extracts from the public papers, and remarkable cures in diseases of the eye and ear. By James Graham, M.D., oculist and aurist.

Inscribed to the very respectable inhabitants of Bristol and Bath. 8vo., 1775.

GRAHAM, JAMES (M.D.) The christian's universal prayer.
3rd edit. 4to., Bath, 1776.

— Doctor Graham has had the honour of publicly exhibiting and explaining to the inhabitants of Bath and Bristol, and to the nobility and gentry who resort to those famous cities from most parts of Europe, the nature and effects of earth bathing, daily for four months, even in the most severe weather of November, December, January, February, and March; and the following are a few of the cases which Dr. G. has had the happiness, under God! of performing by earth bathing and by well-adapted medicines, regimen, &c. And most of the patients have repeatedly urged Dr. G. to the publication of their cures, from motives of gratitude to Dr. G. and of compassion for, and the encouragement of, their fellow creatures who are similarly afflicted with diseases which cannot be cured by other doctors, nor by any other human means; and it is hoped that christian humanity will induce healthy persons, into whose hands this may come, to send it to the sick, weak, or lame, to whom it may be of essential service.

8vo., Bath (1778).

— The general state of medical and chirurgical practice exhibited: shewing them to be inadequate, ineffectual, absurd, and ridiculous, particularly in consumptions, asthmas, nervous, gouty, bilious, scorbutic, scrophulous, rheumatic, and in many other disorders, external as well as internal. And more rational, elegant, speedy, effectual, and lasting methods of cure, by means of diet, simple medicines, aerial, ætherial, magnetic and electric influences, effluvia, medicines, baths, vapours, and applications—recommended. To which are added a great number of recent and remarkable cases and cures never before published. Dedicated to Mrs. Catharine Macaulay. With certificates of cures in Bath.

The general state of medical and chirurgical practice, ancient and modern, exhibited. In which particularly, the errors, and trifling absurdities of the Bath medical practice, and of the ridiculous manner of using the celebrated and very salubrious waters of the city are pointed out.

To which are added fifty-three recent and remarkable cures, mostly in cases which had baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, and the effects of the most powerful medicines.

4th edit. 4to., Bath, 1778.

152pp., and appendix 33pp. separate pagination, including the universal prayer.

GRAHAM, JAMES (M.D.) The general state of medical and chirological practice, exhibited; shewing them to be inadequate, ineffectual, absurd, and ridiculous, particularly in consumption, asthmas, nervous, gouty, bilious, scorbutic, scrophulous, rheumatic, venereal, maniacal, and in many other disorders, external as well as internal. And more rational, elegant, effectual, and lasting methods of cure recommended, by means of diet and simple medicines, rendered more active by the irresistible power of aerial, ætherial, magnetic, electric, and musical effluvia and influences. In which, particularly, the errors and trifling absurdities of what is called the regular London and Bath medical practice, and of the ridiculous manner of using the celebrated and very salubrious waters of Bath, Aix la Chapelle, and the German Spa, are pointed out. And to the whole are added, near an hundred recent and remarkable cases, cured by the above newly-discovered and improved means, after having baffled the effects of the most powerful medicines and mineral waters, and the skill of many of the most celebrated physicians and surgeons in Europe. Among the above are several cures performed last season at the German Spa, under the immediate inspection, and certified by the Signatures Manual, of her grace the dutchess of Devonshire, the right honourable lord and lady Spencer, lady Clermont, his serene highness Frederic prince of Hesse Cassel, the duke de Coligny, the marquis de Serent, and many other noble personages. 6th edit. pp. 248. 8vo., 1779. 71pp., appendix 37pp. separate pagination, including the universal prayer. An abstract was published at half-price.

——— A discourse delivered on Sunday, August 17th, 1783, at Edinburgh, wherein the nature and manner of the resurrection of the human body and the immortality or future modes of existence and progress of the soul ! are philosophically, medically and religiously explained, by doctor James Graham of the temple of health in Pall Mall near the king's palace, London. 5th edit., corrected. 8vo., Hull, 1787.

——— Proposals for the establishment of a new and true christian church : and for cutting off sources of corruption and of anti christianism in the church of England. Containing advices to Dr. Priestley, and to his numerous deluded and deluding followers, critical remarks on the churches of England, Scotland, and Rome, and on the various sects which dissent from them. Directions for the public and private reading of the holy scriptures with the deepest devotion, and with the highest benefit. The whole interspersed with exhortations and words of consolation to all those persons who truly know, who are desirous of knowing, or who are destined to know, that our Lord Jesus Christ is very gracious, and that He is alone—the only possible Saviour of mankind. With a preface demonstrating the generally hurtful, and often fatal effects of the electrical fire, and of the artificially produced airs, which are recommended by Dr. Priestley, when applied to the human body. 8vo., Bath (1788).

GRAHAM, JAMES (M.D.) A new plain and rational treatise on the true nature and uses of the Bath waters. Showing the cases and constitutions in which these waters are really proper to be used, and the best methods of using them, and likewise the cases in which they are hurtful and very dangerous, and demonstrating the great errors, in which mankind have hitherto been under, in regard to bathing in, pumping with, and drinking, these wonderful and powerful waters; and also as to their regimen of food, drink, airing, exercising, etc. To which are added several very remarkable cures performed by Dr. Graham under the immediate ocular inspection and attested by the handwriting of several of the principal nobility of Europe and some great cures performed at Bath.

Sold by all booksellers and by Dr. Graham's servant at his apartments, No. 10, New Bridge street. 8vo., Bath, 1789.

—— (M.D., 11, Bridge street terrace, Bath). Dr. Graham's address to the diseased, weak, and lame. With list of cases in Bath, and a poetical address to him by Benjamin Dyke, of Broad street, Bath. 16mo., 1790.

—— (M.D., O.W.L.) The guardian of health, long-life and happiness; or, Dr. Graham's general directions as to regimen, etc. For the cure or alleviation of all nervous, scorbutic, scrophulous, bilious, gouty, and rheumatic diseases, for the preservation of health, for the happy prolongation of life,—for the improvement and preservation of youth and beauty, . . . and for the enjoyment of temporal peace, and of eternal felicity; affectionately addressed to every reasonable and candid person who wishes to be healthy, respectable, and truly happy both here and hereafter. To which are added, the christian's universal, being a paraphrase on our Lord's prayer; and a complete and infallible guide to everlasting blessedness in heaven!

N.B. This pamphlet if duly attended to, is many millions of times more valuable than its weight in gold or diamonds, which every sensible reader will confess. With general instructions to those who consult Dr. Graham as a physician.

8vo., Newcastle upon Tyne, 1790.

—— A short treatise on the all cleaning—all healing—and all invigorating qualities of the simple earth, when long and repeatedly applied to the naked human-body and lungs, for the safe, speedy, and radical cure of all diseases, internal as well as external, which are in their nature or stage, susceptible of being cured;—for the preservation of the health, vigour, bloom and beauty of body and of mind; for rejuvenating the aged and decaying human-body; and for prolonging life to the very longest possible period. To which are added, a description of the best kinds of soil, or mould, and situations,—and of the best methods of conducting this most efficacious, and most salutary practice of earth bathing. And a free critique on the regular professors or teachers, and practisers of medicine, surgery, etc. Being the first book or pamphlet that ever was published in the world on the subject of earth-bathing. (Bath cases). 8vo., Newcastle on Tyne, 1790.

— Dr. Graham has had the honour of publicly exhibiting and explaining, to the inhabitants of Bath and Bristol and to the nobility and gentry who resort to those famous cities from most parts of Europe, the nature and effects of earth bathing daily for four months, even in the most severe weather of November, December, January, February, and March. And the following are a few of the cures which Dr. G. has had the happiness, under God! of performing by earth bathing and by well adapted medicines, regimen, etc. And most of the patients have repeatedly urged Dr. G. to the publication of their cures from motives of gratitude to Dr. G. and of compassion for and the encouragement of their fellow creatures who are similarly afflicted with diseases which cannot be cured by other doctors nor by any other human means, and it is hoped that christian humanity will induce healthy persons into whose hands this may come, to send it to the sick, weak, or lame, to whom it may be of essential service. 16pp. 8vo. (1792).

— A clear, full and faithful portraiture or description of a certain most beautiful and spotless virgin princess of imperial descent! to a certain youthful heir apparent, in the possession of whom alone, his royal highness can be truly, permanently, and supremely happy. Most humbly and dutifully dedicated to his royal highness George, prince of Wales, etc., and earnestly recommended to the attention of the members of both houses of parliament. With a postscript to the people at large. 8vo., Bath, 1792.

MORFORD, THOMAS. The cry of oppression, occasioned by the priests of England's pulpit-guard, which is a popish law that was made by queen Mary, to guard her friars and jesuits. With a true discovery of the unjust proceedings of those called magistrates in Bathe: wherein is a lamentation over them, and a warning unto them to repent, lest they perish for ever. By one which is hatefully called a Quaker, hated and persecuted without a cause, a prisoner for the Word of God and testimony of Jesus, He by whom the world was made, which said, they shall hale you out of their synagogues, and before magistrates, and shall cast you into prison; and if they kill you (mark) they shall think they do God good service. Known to the world by the name Thomas Morford. 4to., 1659.

With this, having a separate title, but continuous pagination, is:—The deceit and enmity of the priests, manifested. And the doctrine of persecution (by them denyed as popish) witnessed by the scriptures to the doctrine of Christ, His prophets and ministers. And the pope with his priests, and friars, and the priests of England proved to differ nothing in ground and nature one from the other. Wherein is also an exhortation to all people to examine themselves whether they have the true faith, and hope, and belief, with their effects and operations as they are in Jesus. Likewise xx queries propounded to George Long, high priest of Bathe, and priest Sangers of London, by them to be answered in print or writing. (Signed T. M.)

Bath, and most of the fashionable watering places; also at Lloyd's, royal exchange, bank, &c., &c. Giving a correct account of his character, the various species of frauds, disguises, and artifices, practised by him for a series of years with success, exposing his modes of introducing himself into the society of respectable families; his intrigues, traffic, courtships, gaming, &c., whereby he has contrived to live in a gay and splendid manner, on the credulity of the generous and unsuspecting, the merchant, the friend, and the tradesman. Also fully relating the origin and melancholy fate of the beautiful and unfortunate Eliza, whom he enticed to the West Indies under the most solemn assurances of marriage; his base contrivance to make her subservient to his wishes, her imprisonment and release. Written purposely to expose the villainy, perfidy, and abominable practices of a daring and dangerous adventurer, and to guard innocent, and unsuspecting females from falling a prey to such gay, insinuating, and deceitful characters, of which the sad career and melancholy fate of this once gay and blooming Eliza is a lamentable and distressing picture.

He who can boast of deeds so foul, in vice excel,
Is not of woman born, but spawn'd from hell!

The whole forming together a work of general utility and of essential benefit to all merchants, tradesmen, manufacturers; exposing his curious method of obtaining lost bank notes, and his remarkable deceptions practised with a diamond ring; his obtaining furnish'd houses, carriage, servants, &c., and by such apparent display of wealth, prey'd upon the public with ease and facility; and lived in luxury; his adventures in Berkshire with the natural daughter of the late lord ———, at a certain boarding school, his detection at Hammersmith; his advertisements, plots, &c., &c. 8vo., 1804.

efficacy of dulcified spirit of nitre, spirit of salt, and the juices and decoctions of onions, leeks, and cellery as lithontripticks. Presented to the royal society, January 14th, 1741-2. To which is subjoined, an account of the effects of soap lees taken internally, in the case of James Jurin, M.D. 8vo., 1742.

2nd edit., enlarged. 8vo., 1745.

—— A methodical synopsis of mineral waters, comprehending the most celebrated medicinal waters, both cold and hot, of Great Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, and Italy, and several other parts of the world. Wherein their several impregnating minerals being previously described, and their characteristics investigated, each water is reduced to its proper genus; and beside the particular analysis, the virtues, uses, and abuses of the water are described in a method entirely new. Interspersed with tables tending to throw light upon the intricate subject; and abstracts of the principal authors who have treated of mineral waters; and the accounts dispersed in the acts of the most of the learned societies in Europe, are collected and properly digested. (Bath, p. 593; Lincomb, p. 354). 4to., 1757.

Reprinted. 8vo., London, 1758.

—— Thoughts on the different impregnation of mineral waters, more particularly on the existence of sulphur in some of them. Phil. Trans. Abr. 8vo., 1759.

—— The argument of sulphur or no sulphur in waters discussed; with a comparison of the waters of Aix la Chapelle, Bath, and Bristol: wherein the sulphur is restored to the two first and the contents of the last are ascertained with a somewhat greater degree of precision than in the essay of a late adept; and the injured credit of divers other salutiferous springs is vindicated, from the evidence of that author's own experiments corroborated by many others: being the subjects of a correspondence between the author of the methodistical synopsis of mineral waters and W. R., esq., and some others:

SAMPSON. Sampson, an oratorio. Alter'd, and adapted to the stage from the Sampson Agonistes of John Milton. Set to music by George Frederick Handel, esq. 8vo., Bath, 1775.

SAMS, SAMUEL (teacher of geography). A complete and universal system of stenography, or short hand, rendered easy and familiar to the meanest capacity. On a plan entirely new. By this method the beginning of every word in the English language (upwards of forty thousand in number) is found, as may be seen in plate 1. Printed and sold for the author.

3 plates. 8vo., Bath, 1812.

— A new system of mnemonics, or the art of assisting the memory, shewing the application of this useful science to history, chronology, geography, astronomy, statistics, botany, chemistry, specific gravity, mineralogy, logic, rhetoric, logarithms, prose and verse, foreign grammar, &c.

The latin verbs are also arranged in such a manner that four may be conjugated at once in less time than one is done by the common method.

The multiplication table is so made out that it may be learned by a child in two hours. 8vo., Dublin, 1814.

— A complete and universal system of short-hand, on a plan entirely new; rendered easy to any capacity and by which a student may attain the perfection of following a speaker in six weeks.

This system is founded on fixed and unerring principles, and arranged according to the analogy of our language. It is so contrived, that the first syllable or radical of every word in the english, french, or latin languages is expressed by the first character; and the plan is such, that it may be universally adopted, and written and read with the same ease and certainty as the long-hand. It excels in brevity, perspicuity, and fulness of expression any other work of the kind, as is shown by a comparative view of spelling with two of the best authors extant.

2nd and 3rd edits., with considerable alterations and improvements. 8vo., Bath, 1821.

5th edit. 8vo., 1830.

SANCHO AND PEEPO. See Goulding, capt.

SMITH (capt.) A trip to Bath and a tour through the west, being the private history of captain Smith, containing an account of the parents of captain Smith, his being sent from London to a relation's in Buckinghamshire on the account of his many love intrigues, where he privately continued the same course and debauched his relation's wife, servants, &c. His receiving a captain's commission and return to London—an adventure there—his preparations for eloping with Miss B——y, a young lady of £50,000 fortune, but which was hindered by the arrival of a young lady whom he had seduced in the country. His fearing the consequences of his affair with Miss B——y was the occasion of his taking in company with his constant Peggy the trip to Bath—adventures on the road—arrival at Bath—history and description of the place.

The captain slights Peggy—an account of the many amorous intrigues he has at Bath—he repents his ill usage to Peggy and they go to Wells and Bristol—descriptions and histories of these places.

Peggy is delivered of a daughter which increases the captain's love for her. During Peggy's lying-in he has an affair with a married lady and is discovered—the confusion it occasioned—the captain in his flight from the husband runs into a barber's shop where he lives some time in private—the barber tells him his history—he and the captain take a tour through the west—description of all the towns, &c., they go through.

The captain repents and returns to seek Peggy and finds she

With this, having a separate title, but with continuous pagination is:—A conference, between a popish priest and the rev. Mr. Wainhouse, occasion'd by the foregoing sermon. Wherein it is shewn, that the god of the papists may be eat by a mouse; that the doctrine of transubstantiation is the most absurd, ridiculous, stupid, and impious tenet that was ever maintained in the world, and that the adoration of the host is the grossest idolatry that ever was. To which is added a postscript, shewing the folly and absurdity of a protestant's being popishly affected. "I hope there will come a time, when all the world will be amazed to understand by history, that there hath ever been in the world such a portentous and monstrous religion."
